For instance, she recalled the recent performance of an orchestra from Philadelphia at Norwich, a costly undertaking in its advance guarantee, and attended by many from New London. The particular mention in regard to this attitude of an audience in contrast was that at the conclusion of the last number the applause was so persistent as to demand a final recognition on the part of the players.

the applause was so persistent as to demand a final recognition on the part of the players.

"Now, in New London," said she, "by the time the last number is over half the people are getting into their coats and things, and the few who have the feeling to applaud are drowned out in the general confusion of a hurried departure."

Come to think about it, the young woman speaks truly. Of course it is not complimentary to the people who are on the program and they may be the best ever. It makes no difference. The getaway begins before the last beat of the music or the last trill of the song. It is discourteous, an evidence of ill manners, personal selfshness, and so on. But there is nothing you can do about it.

Anyhow, we doubt that people are any more refined in Norwich than in New London. Maybe it is because they move slower in Norwich, takes a longer time to get it through them—do not absorb things so quickly as we do in New London. Got to make some excuse, you know, for this contrasting calculation of our people—and this excuse is as good as any we can think of just now—New London Globe.

GAME BIRDS APPEAR. Shore Towns of Southeastern Connecticut Report Large Numbers.

From the shere towns east of the Thames river it is reported that a great variety of game birds have been seen in that vicinity every day lately. At all the coves where there is a stretch of open water there are numbers of ducks, whistiers, dippers and black ducks. The Hungarian partriage has also been more or less in evidence along the Groton and Stenington trolley routs, the birds being some of those recently set out by the state, and they are apparently wintering well, although it is expected that their numbers have considerably decreased since they were turned lesse in this part of the state.

Judge Joel B. Reed of the superior court has handed down decisions in two cases heard before him last week.

In the suit of William Collins, the wrestler, of Westerly, against Dr. A. M. Purdy of Mystic, claiming $1,000 damages for injuries received when Dr. Purdy's automobile ran into him, Judge Reed found in favor of Dr. Purdy, allowing Collins no damage.

The accident in question happened a year ago last October on an evening when Dr. Purdy was returning from Hope Valley, on the old road near the Thomas Palmer place. Collins claimed that he was prevented, as a result of the accident, keeping several engage-
